

Prurigo Nodularis (Nodular Prurigo) is a chronic skin condition characterized by intense itching and the formation of multiple, raised, red, nodular lesions. It is often associated with underlying conditions such as atopic dermatitis, psoriasis, or systemic diseases. The lesions are typically found on the back, buttocks, and legs. The condition is also known as nodular prurigo and may be associated with atopic dermatitis, psoriasis, or systemic diseases. The lesions are typically found on the back, buttocks, and legs.