

RUBELLA: Acute, mild, self-limiting illness caused by rubella virus. It is characterized by a low-grade fever, lymphadenopathy, and a maculopapular rash that typically begins on the face and spreads to the rest of the body. The rash usually lasts for 1-3 days. Infection during pregnancy can lead to congenital rubella syndrome (CRS), which can cause serious complications for the fetus, including deafness, blindness, and heart defects.