

~~Spider angioma is a common skin lesion in children, often appearing on the face and neck. It is characterized by a central red dot with fine, radiating red lines extending outwards, resembling a spider. Spider angiomas are usually benign and do not require treatment, but they can be a sign of liver disease in some cases.~~