

~~Blepharochalasis is a rare condition characterized by the presence of a small, pale, fleshy growth on the lower eyelid margin. It is often associated with aging and may be a sign of an underlying systemic condition. The growth is typically located on the lower eyelid and may be accompanied by other signs of aging, such as wrinkles and sagging skin. The condition is usually benign and does not require treatment, but it can be a cosmetic concern for some individuals. In some cases, the growth may be removed surgically for cosmetic reasons. It is important to consult a healthcare professional if you notice any changes in your eyelids or if you have any concerns about your eye health.~~
