

Although treatment is effective, there is a lack of definitive evidence to support its use. Various treatments have been used, including corticosteroids, propranolol, and laser therapy. Some studies have shown promising results, while others have reported mixed or negative findings. Further research is needed to determine the most effective and safe treatment options for hemangiomas.