Discordance refers to differential antigen expression between the epidermis and dermis, as opposed to the biopsy specimen as a whole. From Pimpinelli N et al: Defining early mycosis fungoides.

Other treatment is to suppress the disorder to prevent possible progression to overt MF. Other LPP requires more aggressive therapy: high-potency topical corticosteroids with phototherapy. Patients should initially be examined every 3 to 6 months and subsequently every year to be reassured and may forego treatment. The disease may be treated (Mainly for large-plaque parapsoriasis cases considered to be early mycosis fungoides).
