

Transient Acantholytic Dermatitis Grovers Disease

First described in 1970, transient acantholytic dermatosis is characterized by pruritic, discrete papules a

Histopathology

□

Focal acantholysis and dyskeratosis (focal acantholytic dyskeratosis) are present

Pathogenesis .

Despite the histologic similarity to Darier's disease, Grover's disease is a self-limiting condition that typically resolves within a few weeks.

decreased in Grover's disease. The same phenomenon also occurs in other acantholytic conditions such

Ultrastructural Study. In the pemphigus-like zones, there is intradesmosomal separation, fewer desmo

Differential Diagnosis . The features that help to differentiate transient acanthol

